COUNTY OF ST. CLAIR.

HISTORICAL SKETCH.

The Lower Peninsula of the state of Michigan, as it now exists, with the exception of some changes in its southern boundary, was detached from the territory of Indiana and given a separate territorial existence in 1805, William Hull being the first governor, with the seat of government at Detroit. Up to the year 1818 the territory now comprised within St. Clair county formed the township of St. Clair, and was a part of the county of Wayne. In that year the county of Macomb was organized, St. Clair constituting a portion of it.

St. Clair county, including the territory now constituting Sanilac county, was organized by proclamation of Gov. Cass, May 8, 1821, its area being about 1,500 square miles, and its population some 80 families, settled almost entirely along St. Clair river. The county seat was located at St. Clair, where there were half a dozen houses at that time. James Fulton and William Thorn agreed to build a court house, but failed to do so, and for several years court was held in Mr. Fulton's house. Mr. Fulton built a jail for the county in 1821, for which the contract price was $35, the hinges and bolts, furnished by Andrew Westbrook, costing $6.62 extra.

The location of the county seat was not satisfactory to the residents of either the northern or southern sections of the county, and a movement for its removal to Newport (now Marine City), began almost immediately. Commissioners appointed for the purpose investigated the matter, and reported to the legislative council of the territory, January 19, 1825, in favor of the retention of the county seat at St. Clair. Subscriptions amounting to $637.50 were made for the erection of buildings at Newport, if the county seat should be located there, but this movement also failed. Previous to the action of the legislative council retaining the seat of justice at St. Clair, Thomas Palmer and David C. McKinstry had pledged themselves to build a jail and court house, which they did, the building being of hewn logs, about 24 x 34 feet in size, with living rooms for the jailer and cells for prisoners on the ground floor, and a court room on the second floor. It was accepted by the board of supervisors September 3, 1827, although not constructed according to contract. This building was used until 1853, when it was destroyed by fire. The brick building erected in its place was used for county purposes until the removal of the county seat to Port Huron, in 1871, and the jail continued to be occupied for keeping prisoners until the completion of the new jail, in 1884.

An unsuccessful attempt to remove the county seat to Port Huron was made in 1842. In 1868-9 a proposition to remove the county seat to Smith's Creek was carried, but no steps for its actual removal were taken. In 1870 the board of supervisors voted by a two-thirds majority to remove the county seat to Port Huron, and the proposition was ratified by the people by a majority of 532. The first meeting of the board of supervisors at the new county seat opened April 27, 1871. The City of Port Huron subsequently built the present court house and city hall, at a cost of nearly $40,000. The present jail was built by the county in 1884, at a cost of about $15,000.

Organization of the townships of the county as they now exist was effected at different times, exact particulars being given under the township headings preceding the township directory portion of this book.

There are conflicting theories as to the origin of the name St. Clair, as applied to the lake and river bearing that name. The one most generally accepted is, that in the year 1679 the crew of the schooner Griffin landed on the shores of Lake St. Clair on the feast day of Sainte Claire, and named the lake in honor of the founder of the Poor Claires. Another is that the name came from an officer named St. Clair, who was on duty in this section in the American service after the Revolutionary war. St. Clair county was named after the river which forms its eastern boundary.

One of the chief industries of the county from the time of its earliest settlement by English speaking white men, until the timber had all disappeared, was lumbering. Between 1840 and 1870 many fortunes were made in the lumber industry by citizens of the county, most of whom are now dead, or have long since removed to other localities. Since 1873 very little lumber has been cut in St. Clair county except from logs brought down in rafts from points on Lake Huron.

The marine interests of the county have always been important, many vessels having been built at the river towns. A large number of vessels have also been owned in the county at all times since the lake marine became fairly established, and hundreds of its citizens follow what may be called a "lake-faring" life during the season of navigation, in all capacities, from captain down.

The development of the salt industry dates from 1882, when the Marine City Stave company put down a well to the salt rock, found at a depth of about 1,700 feet. To Crocket McElroy, of St. Clair, who was president of the Marine City Stave Company at that time, is due all the credit for the discovery and practical demonstration of the value of the vast bed of salt rock which underlies St. Clair county.

The agricultural advantages of St. Clair county were slow in developing, compared with those of interior counties where the surface is more rolling and the soil more diversified. The country adjacent to St. Clair river, and extending back from 10 to 25 miles, is flat, and slopes very gradually toward the river. Without doubt in past geological ages it has been covered with water, and as the lake receded sand ridges were formed in places, and many square miles of the surface still remains covered with drift sand, to a depth varying from a few inches to several feet. Such soil is of course not very strong; but by far the greater portion of the surface is clay, or clay loam, or clay and sand mixed. The subsoil everywhere is clay, which has a depth of 100 feet or more at nearly all points where borings have been made. On the whole the soil of the county is strong and rich, and with thorough drainage St. Clair county will come to rank high as an agricultural section.

The first railroad built through the county was the Grand Trunk, from Port Huron to Detroit; the second the present Chicago & Grand Trunk; the third the St. Clair branch of the Michigan Central, from St. Clair to Ridgeway; and the fourth the Port Huron & Northwestern, having three branches or divisions within the limits of the county.

With few exceptions the wagon roads of the county have not yet been made permanently good. Some plank roads were built between 1850 and 1870, but these have mostly disappeared. Gravel roads have been built to a limited extent, but the scarcity of gravel, except in the southwestern portion of the county, greatly retards this most desirable public improvement.

The first permanent white settlement on the St. Clair river appears to have been at Port Huron, so far as there is any positive record. Seven French families settled there in 1790, their names being given in the historical sketch of Port Huron in this book. It is known, also, that the families of Capt. Cottrell, Capt. Alexander Harrow, Capt. William Thorn and a Mr. Paschal resided in what is now Cottrellville township as early as 1796, but the precise date of their settlement there is not known. A full sketch of the pioneers of the county, or of pioneer life here, does not come within the scope of this work, nor would such a sketch be of special value for reference.

PORT HURON.

HISTORICAL SKETCH.

In the year 1686 a French military post was established at the point where Fort Gratiot was formerly located, near the northern limits of Port Huron city. This fort was called St. Joseph, and was occupied for about two years. After its abandonment no further settlement was attempted at this point until 1790, 104 years later. During that time, and, indeed, for some time afterward, the ground on which the city of Port Huron is built was a favorite camping place for the Indians, as many as 3,000 being in camp here at one time. In the summer of 1790 seven Frenchmen with their families located here, their names being as follows: Anselm Petit, Francois Lerviere, Baptiste Levais, J. B. Duchesne, Michael Jarvais, J. B. Courneais, and Peter Moreaux. M. Jarvais built a saw mill on what is now called Indian Creek, then known as La Riviere Jarvais. Black River was then known as La Riviere Delude.

During the war of 1812 the settlers were obliged to leave their homes, but they returned in 1815 with reinforcements, and again took possession of them.

Edward Petit, it is supposed, was the first white child born within the territory now included in the city of Port Huron. He was a son of Anselm Petit, and was born in a log house near the foot of Court street, February 7, 1813. Anselm Petit built the first frame house here, in the year 1819. The same year Daniel B. Harrington located here, and John Riley, a half-breed, who claimed ownership of the land, built a house near the point where Military street crosses Black River, on the southwest corner of Military and Water streets. At that time nearly the whole of the territory of Michigan was a wilderness.

Originally the village and township were called Desmond. The township was organized in 1826, a meeting being held on Monday, May 6, at Fort Gratiot, when the following officers were chosen:

Supervisor—Martin Pickens.

Assessors—Jeremiah Harrington, Isaac Davis.

Highway Commissioners—Morris McGarvey, Isaac Davis, Richard Stansbury.

Constables—Reuben Dodge, Lewis Facer, Francis Duchesne.

In 1835 portions of the territory south of Black River were platted and offered for sale by Edward Petit and Messrs. White & Harrington, the village so laid out being called Peru. In 1837 Major John Thorn platted a small piece of land on the north side and called it Paris. The name Port Huron was first applied by Mr. D. B. Harrington to his plat, the owners of other plats following, and thus consolidating the whole under one name.

The former site of Fort Gratiot, on the northern limits of the city, was occupied as a military post in 1814, by a detachment of regulars and militia under Major Forsythe, of the regular army. Capt. Gratiot was the engineer officer who built the first fort, and after whom it was named. The cost of the work was about three hundred dollars. In 1822 the post was abandoned, and the buildings in it were turned over to two Presbyterian missionaries named Hart and Hudson. In 1828 the post was reoccupied by the military, when the buildings and grounds were improved and strengthened, and thereafter, until 1876 or thereabouts, the barracks were generally occupied by one or more companies of United States troops. The land was sold to the P. H. & N. W. R'y Co. in 1880, and the fort finally abandoned.

The first school house was built by Francis P. Browning, on the north side of Black River. The first hotel was built in 1827, of logs, and was located on Quay street. In 1833 Military street was laid out and the first bridge across Black river built.

Port Huron was organized as a village in 1849, L. M. Mason being its first president. Martin S. Gillett, Wellington Davis, J. W. Campfield, John Wells, H. L. Stevens and Robert Hickling constituted its first board of trustees. Its subsequent presidents were as follows: M. S. Gillett, 1850; D. B. Harrington, 1851; Alonzo E. Noble, 1852; Wellington Davis, 1853; Alvah Sweetser, 1854; Newell Avery, 1855; John Miller, 1856.

Port Huron became a city in 1857, the first city election being held April 6th of that year. Lists of city officers are given on subsequent pages. The original charter of the city has been several times amended.

The Grand Trunk, Port Huron's first railway, was completed between Port Huron and Detroit in 1859.

The Port Huron & Northern Michigan railroad was projected in 1836, and a company was formed in 1841, but nothing was done toward the actual construction of a road. In 1856 another company was formed, a line located and considerable work done. A new company purchased the franchise of the road in 1865, and the road was opened to Lapeer June 6, 1871. Subsequently it was extended to Flint, and after consolidation with the Peninsular road, and the construction of a link from Flint to Lansing, finally passed under control of the Grand Trunk and became the present Chicago & Grand Trunk, extending from Port Huron to Chicago, a distance of 335 miles. Port Huron city voted nearly $80,000 aid to the road. William L. Bancroft took the lead in the construction of the road, and was its manager until a year or two before it was sold to the Grand Trunk. This road has been of great value to Port Huron.

A railroad to Saginaw was projected in 1872, and $100,000 was subscribed in Port Huron as its capital stock, but nothing was done toward its construction.

The Port Huron & Northwestern road was projected in 1878, and the first section of the road, from Port Huron to Croswell, was opened May 12, 1879. March 8, 1880, it was opened to Carsonville, and September 13, of the same year, the first regular train was run to Sand Beach. The East Saginaw line was completed February 21, 1882; the Almont line October 3; and the Port Austin division December 11, 1882. In 1881 the iron railroad bridge at the mouth of Black river was built, with the passenger and freight depot on the south side of Black river, and since that time all regular passenger trains of the Grand Trunk, Chicago & Grand Trunk and Port Huron & Northwestern have passed over this line. The Port Huron & Northwestern road, and the river front line, were the work of citizens of Port Huron, and have proved of the greatest advantage and benefit to the city.

The Port Huron street railway, which originally ran along the river front through Pine Grove park to the Grand Trunk depot, was opened in 1867. It has seen many changes since that time, and is now the Port Huron Electric railway, extending north to Gratiot beach, a distance of nearly four miles.

Nearly all permanent public improvements of which the city is now possessed have been introduced since 1870. A brick high school building (since burned and rebuilt) had been erected previous to that time, as had also the second ward school building, and two wooden swing bridges across Black river (both since replaced by iron bridges) were built in 1869. In 1870 the Port Huron Gas Light Company completed its works, and a portion of the streets of the city were lighted for the first time.

In 1871 the agitation for the construction of water works began, and the proposition received the approval of the Common Council and citizens the same year. The opposition of Mayor John Miller caused delay, however, and it was not until the summer of 1873, after the election of John Johnston as mayor, that the works were finally completed and put in operation. The machinery was built by the Holly company, of Lockport, N. Y., and the first pipe was laid by Walker & Rich. The works have proved a great success.

The city hall and court house was completed in 1873, costing nearly $40,000. The city grants the use of the first and second stories free to the county, retaining the basement for city purposes.

The corner stone of the Government building, in which are located the postoffice, customs and other Government offices, and the U. S. court room, was laid October 8th, 1874, and the building was completed two years later. Its cost was $250,000.

The building of sewers, the laying of pavements, and the graveling of several streets, has been in progress since 1876, and these improvements have greatly benefitted the city.

The sale of the Fort Gratiot military reservation in 1871 gave the city an opportunity to grow to the northward, and the present populous fifth ward is the result. The sale of the remnant of the reservation to the P. H. & N. W. Ry. Co. took place in 1880.

The Port Huron Telephone exchange was opened in 1880, and electric lighting was introduced into the city in 1884. The practical development of natural gas dates from 1886, when Edgar White introduced it into his residence for heating purposes. The laying of pipes for the distribution of natural gas began in October, 1887.

The lumber business, which until 1873 was the chief industry of the city, decreased rapidly after that year, the great fires having killed most of the timber along Black river and its tributaries, and in recent years all the logs cut in the city have been brought in rafts from points along Lake Huron.

The grain trade, which is now very large, has grown up entirely since the Chicago & Grand Trunk and Port Huron & Northwestern railways were built.

The shipbuilding business, which at one time included the construction of many new vessels, has of late years been confined almost exclusively to repairs, but still employs a large number of men. The marine interests of the city also continue large, and its wholesale trade is steadily increasing. Its manufacturing interests are also important and growing.

STREETS AND NUMBERS.

By the provisions of an ordinance adopted by the Common Council, and approved March 8, 1887, the city of Port Huron is divided into two districts for house numbering.

One hundred numbers are allowed for each block, and 20 feet front is allowed for each number. Thus, in blocks having 400 feet front, there are 40 numbers, beginning, for example, on a street running east and west, between Sixth and Seventh streets, at 601, and ending at 640.

On the south side of Black river streets running east and west have the even numbers on the south side and the odd numbers on the north side. The numbering begins at St. Clair river, the blocks east of First street being numbered from 1 to 100, between First and Second streets 101 to 200, and so on westward to the city limits.

On streets running north and south, south of Black river, the even numbers are on the east side and the odd numbers on the west side. Numbering begins at Black river, in the northwestern corner of the fourth ward. The numbers between Miller street and Lapeer avenue are between 601 and 700; between Lapeer avenue and Gillett street 701 to 800; between Gillett and Howard streets 801 to 900; and so on to the southern limits of the city.

On the north side of Black river the same general plan prevails, numbers on east and west streets beginning at St. Clair river and running west, 100 for each block; and on north and south streets beginning at Black river and running north.

FORT GRATIOT VILLAGE.

This village is located directly north of the fifth ward of Port Huron city, and except in their separate municipal governments and postoffices, the two places are substantially one.

Fort Gratiot was incorporated in 1881, O'Brien J. Atkinson being the first president. The village has four churches, one school house (graded), one lodge of Masons, one of Odd Fellows, one tent of Maccabees, one Knights of Honor, one Royal Arcanum, one of Foresters, one of Royal Templars of Temperance. The Walker system of water works was put into operation in 1885-6, at a cost of $28,000; J. A. McMartin is superintendent, and Edward Hollis chief engineer.

Extensive car shops of the Chicago & Grand Trunk railway are located on the lake shore in the eastern section of the village, and the locomotive shops of the same company are situated on the northern boundary line, just within the city limits of Port Huron. A large portion of the citizens of the village are in the employ of the Chicago & Grand Trunk and Grand Trunk railways.

MARINE CITY.

This flourishing city is located at the confluence of Belle river with the St. Clair, 45 miles northeast of Detroit, and 20 south of Port Huron, the county seat, eight miles north of Algonac, and eight south of St. Clair. At present it has no railroad, but solicitors are at work on a proposed line from Detroit to Port Huron; passing through Marine City and St. Clair, and it seems probable that such a line will be built during the present summer. St. Clair is now its nearest railroad point on the American side of St. Clair river, with which it is connected by stage in the winter. The traveling public also find the Erie & Huron railway on the Canadian side of the river, a convenient means of ingress and egress. A ferry connects Marine City with this railroad at Sombra, one mile distant.

Daily communication is had with Detroit, Port Huron, and the American shore of Lake Huron during the season of navigation. Two daily stages run to Port Huron and St. Clair during the winter. Telephone connections with the Michigan Bell Telephone Co., and telegraph via Western Union and United Lines.

Ship building is one of the principal industries, the city having four ship yards, out of which have been turned 38 side-wheel steamers, 63 propellers, and 70 sailing vessels. There are now (January, 1888), three large propellers in course of construction there. The vessel interests are very extensive, representing one of the finest fleets on the lakes, 56 in number.

The most extensive salt bed in the world was discovered here in July, 1882, at a depth of 1,633 feet. The thickness of the bed is not known, although it has been penetrated 141 feet. There are eight salt wells and nine salt blocks, with a capacity of 3,000 barrels per day.

Its manufactories are represented by one stave mill, seven cooper shops, one heading and two planing mills, one hoop factory, one flouring mill, two brick and tile yards, two saw mills, one boiler shop, one machine shop and foundry. There are four churches: Catholic Methodist Episcopal, German Lutheran, and Episcopal; two public and two private schools, one lodge of Masons, one Knights of Pythias, one Odd Fellows, one A. O. U. W., one K. O. T. M., and one G. A. R. There is one bank, and there are four hotels, and a liberal supply of stores. The press is ably represented by two newspapers, the Magnet and the Reporter.

Marine City was incorporated as a city June 8th, 1887, and the first election was held July 11th.

A good farming section surrounds the city, the soil being of an extremely rich black as well as loam clay, commanding brick making, and salt making are important industries of the city. It also has a sash, door and blind factory, a large tannery, flouring and saw mills and other industries. Its mercantile trade with the surrounding country is large.

There are five churches, two public school buildings, costing $18,000, a National bank and a weekly newspaper, The Republican, established in 1834. The Walker system of water works have been in operation since 1886. St. Clair is the eastern terminus of the Michigan Midland division of the Michigan Central railroad, terminating at Lenox station, on the Grand Trunk, and has ferry connections with Courtwright, on the Canadian side of the St. Clair river, the western terminus of the St. Clair branch of the Canadian Southern railroad. There are lodges of Masons, Knights of Pythias, and Knights of Labor, a tent of Maccabees, G. A. R. post, and other societies. The city officials are as follows: Mayor, Charles H. Waterloo; Clerk, Ethan E. Trim; Assessor, George A. Wolvin; Treasurer, James G. Wortz. City council: First ward—John L. Agens, Joseph H. Bruso, William E. Thompson; second ward—Frederick C. Strauss, Samuel A. Harkness, Thomas W. Ryan. Supervisors, Hermann Fischer, Charles H. Carleton. Constables, Peter Akred, Charles Gliem; City Marshal, Miles C. Hickman; Water Works Sup't, William B. Morse; Engineers, John Sawher and S. P. Gilbert; Superintendent of Schools, J. C. Shattuck.

Somerville School, for young ladies, is delightfully located in the northern section of the city, fronting on St. Clair river. The buildings are large and splendidly fitted up for the purposes of a boarding school, and the attendance is large. Dr. C. C. Wetsell is principal, with an able corps of assistants.
